SEMESTER-III

HISDSM201

HISTORY OF INDIA FROM 650 TO 1206 CE

Unit I

a) Chalukyas: Political achievements – Pulakesin II, Cultural Achievements

b) Rashtrakutas: Political history, Administration

Unit II

a) Pallavas: Political History : Mahendravarman I, Narasimhavarman, Administrative system,

b) Cholas: Political History: Rajaraja the Great, Rajendra Chola, Administrative system

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Unit III

a). Political Achievements of Dharmapala & DevaPala

b). Cultural Contribution of the Palas

c). Sena dynasty – Ballal Sen & Lakshman Sen

Unit IV

1. Pratiharas— Mihirabhuja, Administration

2. Tripartite Struggle- Pratihara-Pala-Rashtrakuta

3. The Gahadavalas – political achievements.

Unit V:

1. Arab invasion of Sind and its effects.

2. Indian invasion of Sultan Mahmud of Ghazni
3. Prithviraj Chauhan
4. Battles of Tarain.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

UNIT – 1

ONE MARK:

A. Chalukyas

1. Who was the most famous ruler of the Chalukya dynasty of Badami?

Answer: Pulakesin II.

2. What was the capital of the Early Chalukyas?

Answer: Badami (Vatapi).

3. Which dynasty ruled from Badami in the Deccan?

Answer: The Early Chalukya dynasty.

4. Who was the contemporary ruler of North India during the reign of Pulakesin II?

Answer: Harshavardhana.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

5. Which ruler of the Chalukya dynasty defeated Harshavardhana?

Answer: Pulakesin II.

6. Which river is traditionally associated with the boundary between the territories of Pulakesin II and Harshavardhana?

Answer: The Narmada River.

7. Who composed the Aihole inscription of Pulakesin II?

Answer: Ravikirti.

8. Which Chinese traveller visited the Chalukya kingdom during the reign of Pulakesin II?

Answer: Xuanzang (Hiuen Tsang).

9. Which Pallava ruler defeated Pulakesin II and captured Badami?

Answer: Narasimhavarman I.

10. Name one famous temple associated with Chalukya architecture.

Answer: The Virupaksha Temple at Pattadakal.

B. Rashtrakutas

11. Who founded the Rashtrakuta power in the Deccan?

Answer: Dantidurga.

12. What was the capital of the Rashtrakuta dynasty?

Answer: Manyakheta (Malkhed).

13. Who was the most famous ruler of the Rashtrakuta dynasty?

Answer: Amoghavarsha I.

14. Which Rashtrakuta ruler built the famous Kailasa Temple at Ellora?

Answer: Krishna I.

15. Which Rashtrakuta ruler is associated with the Kannada literary work Kavirajamarga?

Answer: Amoghavarsha I.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

TWO MARK:

A. Chalukyas

1. Who was Pulakesin II? Mention one of his major achievements.

Answer: Pulakesin II was the most famous ruler of the Early Chalukya dynasty of Badami. His major achievement was defeating Harshavardhana and checking his expansion towards the Deccan.

2. What was the importance of the Aihole inscription?

Answer: The Aihole inscription, composed by Ravikirti, describes the achievements of Pulakesin II. It is an important source of information about the political history of the Chalukyas.

3. What was the capital of the Chalukyas? Mention one important feature of the city.

Answer: Badami, also known as Vatapi, was the capital of the Early Chalukyas. It was an important political and cultural centre, famous for its rock-cut cave temples.

4. How did Pulakesin II stop Harshavardhana's expansion?

Answer: Pulakesin II defeated Harshavardhana near the Narmada River. This checked Harsha's southward expansion and helped maintain Chalukya power in the Deccan.

5. Mention two important features of Chalukya temple architecture.

Answer:

- Chalukya temples combined elements of northern Nagara and southern Dravida architectural styles.
- They were famous for beautifully carved pillars, sculptures and decorative designs.

6. Name two important centres of Chalukya architecture.

Answer: Badami and Pattadakal were two important centres of Chalukya architecture. Aihole was also a major centre of early temple development.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

7. What was the cultural contribution of the Chalukyas?

Answer: The Chalukyas made significant contributions to temple architecture, sculpture and religious art. They also supported the development of Sanskrit and regional literary traditions.

8. What was the significance of the Virupaksha Temple?

Answer: The Virupaksha Temple at Pattadakal is an important example of Chalukya temple architecture. It reflects the development of the Dravida style and was built under the patronage of Queen Lokamahadevi.

B. Rashtrakutas

9. Who founded Rashtrakuta power in the Deccan?

Answer: Dantidurga established Rashtrakuta supremacy in the Deccan during the eighth century CE. He overthrew the Badami Chalukyas and laid the foundation for Rashtrakuta political power.

10. Mention two important achievements of Amoghavarsha I.

Answer:

- Amoghavarsha I strengthened the Rashtrakuta kingdom through his long reign.
- He encouraged literature and learning and was associated with the Kannada work Kavirajamarga.

11. What was the importance of Manyakheta?

Answer: Manyakheta, in present-day Karnataka, was the capital of the Rashtrakutas. It became an important political, cultural and literary centre during their rule.

12. Who built the Kailasa Temple at Ellora? Why is it famous?

Answer: Krishna I, a Rashtrakuta ruler, built the Kailasa Temple at Ellora. It is famous for its magnificent rock-cut architecture, carved from a single rock.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

13. Mention two features of Rashtrakuta administration.

Answer:

- The king was the highest authority in the administration.
- The kingdom was divided into administrative units, with provincial and local officials helping govern the territories.

14. What was the role of feudatories under the Rashtrakutas?

Answer: Feudatories were subordinate rulers who governed territories under Rashtrakuta supremacy. They provided military support and tribute to the central authority, although some occasionally challenged it.

15. Mention two cultural contributions of the Rashtrakutas.

Answer:

- They promoted Kannada and Sanskrit literature, including the work Kavirajamarga.
- They contributed to art and architecture, particularly through the construction of the Kailasa Temple at Ellora.

BROAD ANSWER:

Question 1. Discuss the political achievements of Pulakesin II.

Answer:

Introduction

Pulakesin II was one of the greatest rulers of the Early Chalukya dynasty of Badami. He ruled from approximately 610 to 642 CE and made the Chalukya kingdom one of the most powerful states in the Deccan. His military victories, diplomatic relations and territorial expansion played an important role in the political history of early medieval India.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

1. Accession to the throne

Pulakesin II belonged to the Chalukya dynasty, which ruled from Badami in present-day Karnataka. He came to power after defeating his uncle Mangalesha, who had been ruling the kingdom. After securing the throne, Pulakesin II strengthened the kingdom and expanded its territories.

2. Expansion of the kingdom

Pulakesin II followed an active policy of military expansion. He brought several neighbouring territories under Chalukya influence and strengthened his control over important regions of the Deccan. His victories over local rulers helped establish the Chalukyas as a major political power in southern and central India.

3. Victory over Harshavardhana

One of the most important achievements of Pulakesin II was his successful resistance to Harshavardhana, the powerful ruler of northern India. Harsha attempted to extend his influence towards the south, but Pulakesin II checked his advance near the Narmada River.

This victory was politically significant because it established the Narmada region as an important boundary between the spheres of influence of the northern and Deccan powers. It also increased the prestige of Pulakesin II.

4. Conflict with the Pallavas

Pulakesin II fought against the Pallava dynasty of Kanchipuram, which was a major rival of the Chalukyas in southern India. Initially, he achieved military successes against the Pallavas under Mahendravarman I.

However, the conflict continued during the reign of Mahendravarman's successor, Narasimhavarman I. The Pallava ruler eventually attacked the Chalukya capital, Vatapi (Badami), and captured it around 642 CE. Pulakesin II is generally believed to have died during these conflicts, although the exact circumstances remain uncertain.

5. Diplomatic relations

Pulakesin II also maintained diplomatic relations with foreign powers. According to historical accounts, he exchanged diplomatic contacts with the Sasanian ruler Khosrow II of Persia. These contacts indicate that the Chalukya kingdom participated in wider international political and commercial networks.

6. Historical importance

The achievements of Pulakesin II are described in the famous Aihole inscription of 634 CE, composed by his court poet Ravikirti. The inscription is an important historical source for understanding his reign, military campaigns and political status.

Question 2. Describe the cultural achievements of the Chalukyas.

Answer:

Introduction

The Chalukyas of Badami were important rulers of the Deccan from the sixth to the eighth century CE. Besides their political and military achievements, they made remarkable contributions to Indian culture. Their major contributions were in temple architecture, sculpture, painting, literature and religion. The artistic achievements of the Chalukyas can be seen particularly at Badami, Aihole and Pattadakal in present-day Karnataka.

1. Development of temple architecture

The most important cultural contribution of the Chalukyas was the development of temple architecture. Their architects experimented with different architectural forms and combined features of the northern Nagara and southern Dravida styles.

Aihole became an important centre for early temple experiments. Its temples demonstrate different plans, designs and methods of construction. The Lad Khan Temple and Durga Temple are notable examples of early Chalukya architecture.

Badami was another major centre of architectural development. Its rock-cut cave temples contain images of Hindu deities, beautifully carved pillars and decorative sculptures.

2. Temples at Pattadakal

Pattadakal represents the highest achievements of Chalukya temple architecture. It contains temples built in both Nagara and Dravida styles.

The Virupaksha Temple is one of the finest examples of Chalukya architecture. It was commissioned by Queen Lokamahadevi during the reign of Vikramaditya II to commemorate her husband's military victory over the Pallavas. The temple is known for its elaborate sculptures, impressive structure and religious significance.

The Mallikarjuna Temple is another important monument at Pattadakal. These temples demonstrate the artistic skills and architectural knowledge of Chalukya craftsmen.

3. Sculpture and artistic excellence

Chalukya sculptors created beautiful images of Hindu gods and goddesses. Sculptures of Shiva, Vishnu and other deities decorated temples and cave shrines. The figures display detailed ornamentation, expressive movements and careful attention to proportion.

The cave temples of Badami are particularly famous for their sculptural works. These monuments reflect the religious beliefs and artistic traditions of the period.

4. Painting

The Chalukyas also contributed to the development of painting. The cave temples of Badami contain traces of early mural paintings. These paintings provide evidence of the artistic traditions that existed in the Deccan during the early medieval period.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

5. Literature and language

Sanskrit enjoyed considerable prestige during Chalukya rule and was used in inscriptions and literary works. Regional languages also developed during this period. Kannada gradually became an important language of literary and cultural expression in the Deccan.

The Aihole inscription of Pulakesin II, composed by Ravikirti in Sanskrit, is an important example of the literary and epigraphic traditions of the Chalukya court.

6. Religious traditions

The Chalukyas supported different religious traditions, particularly Hinduism, including Shaivism and Vaishnavism. Jainism also received patronage during this period. Their religious monuments demonstrate the coexistence of different beliefs and the importance of religion in cultural life.

Question 3. Trace the political history of the Rashtrakutas.

Answer:

Introduction

The Rashtrakutas were one of the most powerful dynasties of early medieval India. They ruled large parts of the Deccan from the eighth to the tenth century CE. Their political history was marked by military expansion, conflicts with neighbouring kingdoms and the development of a powerful empire. Their capital was Manyakheta, in present-day Karnataka.

1. Rise of the Rashtrakutas

The Rashtrakutas rose to power during the eighth century CE. Dantidurga was the ruler who established their political supremacy in the Deccan. He defeated the Badami Chalukyas and laid the foundation for an independent Rashtrakuta kingdom.

His successor, Krishna I, further strengthened the dynasty. He expanded Rashtrakuta influence and is remembered for commissioning the famous Kailasa Temple at Ellora.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

2. Govinda III

Govinda III was one of the greatest military rulers of the Rashtrakuta dynasty. He conducted successful military campaigns against several rival powers and greatly expanded the influence of the empire.

His campaigns extended Rashtrakuta authority across important parts of northern and southern India. His military successes made the Rashtrakutas a major force in Indian politics.

3. Amoghavarsha I

Amoghavarsha I was another important ruler of the Rashtrakuta dynasty. He ruled for a long period and is remembered for his interest in literature, religion and culture.

During his reign, Manyakheta became an important political and cultural centre. Although his reign included political challenges and conflicts, he contributed significantly to the stability and prestige of the dynasty.

4. Conflict over Kannauj

One of the most important features of Rashtrakuta political history was the tripartite struggle for control over Kannauj in northern India.

The three principal powers involved were:

- The Rashtrakutas of the Deccan.
- The Palas of Bengal and Bihar.
- The Gurjara-Pratiharas of northern and western India.

Kannauj was politically important because it represented prestige and control over a strategic region of northern India. Rashtrakuta rulers, including Dhruva and Govinda III, intervened in northern Indian politics and achieved important military successes. However, no single dynasty maintained permanent control over Kannauj throughout this struggle.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

5. Later rulers and decline

The Rashtrakuta dynasty continued to rule under several later kings. Krishna III was one of its last powerful rulers. He conducted military campaigns in southern India and achieved victories against the Cholas.

After Krishna III, the dynasty gradually weakened because of succession disputes, internal difficulties and the growing power of subordinate chiefs. In 973 CE, Tailapa II of the Western Chalukya line overthrew the Rashtrakutas and established Western Chalukya power in the Deccan.

6. Historical significance

The Rashtrakutas played a major role in connecting northern and southern Indian politics. Their military campaigns influenced the balance of power across the subcontinent. They also encouraged trade, religious institutions and cultural activities within their territories.

Question 4. Explain the main features of Rashtrakuta administration.

Answer:

Introduction

The Rashtrakutas established a powerful kingdom in the Deccan between the eighth and tenth centuries CE. Their administration helped them govern extensive territories and maintain military strength. The king stood at the centre of the political system, while ministers, provincial officers, local authorities and subordinate rulers assisted in administration.

1. Position of the king

The king was the highest political and military authority. He supervised the administration, led military campaigns and maintained relations with neighbouring rulers. Rashtrakuta kings used royal titles to express their authority and prestige.

Although the king held supreme power, the practical administration of the empire depended on ministers, officials and local authorities.

2. Central administration

The central administration consisted of ministers and other important officials who assisted the king in governing the kingdom. They helped manage revenue collection, military affairs, diplomatic relations and general administration.

The exact organisation of the royal court varied over time. Inscriptions provide evidence of royal officers and administrative responsibilities, although they do not describe every department in a uniform manner.

3. Provincial administration

The Rashtrakuta kingdom was divided into administrative units to make governing a large territory easier. Larger territorial divisions were subdivided into smaller units, which were administered by officials or local authorities.

Provincial governors were responsible for maintaining order, collecting revenue and implementing royal decisions. In some regions, subordinate rulers and powerful local chiefs exercised considerable authority while acknowledging Rashtrakuta supremacy.

4. Role of feudatories

Feudatories played an important role in Rashtrakuta administration. They were subordinate chiefs or rulers who governed their own territories under the authority of the Rashtrakuta king.

They generally provided military assistance, tribute or other forms of support to the central ruler. This arrangement enabled the Rashtrakutas to control extensive areas without directly administering every village and region.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

However, powerful feudatories could become a source of political instability. When central authority weakened, some subordinate chiefs asserted independence and challenged the ruling dynasty.

5. Revenue administration

Agriculture was a major source of state income. Land revenue formed an important part of the resources available to the government. Taxes and other dues were collected from agricultural lands, villages, trade and economic activities.

Revenue helped maintain the royal court, support officials, finance military campaigns and maintain public and religious institutions. Inscriptions also record land grants made to religious establishments and learned individuals.

6. Military administration

The Rashtrakutas maintained military forces to protect their territories and expand their influence. Their armies included different categories of troops, including infantry, cavalry and elephants.

Feudatories also supplied soldiers for royal campaigns. Military strength was particularly important because the Rashtrakutas frequently fought the Palas, Gurjara-Pratiharas, Cholas and other regional powers.

7. Local administration

Villages formed the basic units of rural life and revenue collection. Local headmen and other authorities helped manage village affairs and coordinate with higher officials. Local institutions and community arrangements played a role in the management of resources and everyday administration, although practices varied by region.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Question 5. What was the Tripartite Struggle? Explain the role of the Rashtrakutas in it.

Answer:

Introduction

The Tripartite Struggle was a prolonged political conflict among three major dynasties of early medieval India: the Rashtrakutas of the Deccan, the Palas of Bengal and Bihar, and the Gurjara-Pratiharas of northern and western India. The main objective was to gain control over Kannauj, an important political centre in northern India. The struggle continued during the eighth, ninth and tenth centuries CE and played a significant role in Indian political history.

1. Importance of Kannauj

Kannauj was an important city in the Gangetic plain. It had considerable political and strategic importance because of its location and its association with the imperial power of Harshavardhana.

After the decline of Harsha's empire, several regional powers competed to establish supremacy in northern India. Control over Kannauj was considered a symbol of political prestige and authority. This made the city the centre of a long struggle among the three dynasties.

2. The three powers involved

The Palas: The Pala dynasty ruled over Bengal and Bihar. Dharmapala was one of its most important rulers and attempted to extend his influence over Kannauj and northern India.

The Gurjara-Pratiharas: The Gurjara-Pratiharas emerged as a powerful dynasty in northern and western India. Nagabhata II was an important ruler who challenged Pala influence and sought control over Kannauj.

The Rashtrakutas: The Rashtrakutas ruled the Deccan and frequently intervened in northern Indian politics. Their military campaigns against the Palas and Gurjara-Pratiharas demonstrated their ambition to establish imperial supremacy beyond the Deccan.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

3. Role of Dhruva

Dhruva was one of the earliest Rashtrakuta rulers to intervene significantly in the struggle. He conducted military campaigns in northern India and defeated important rival powers, including the Gurjara-Pratihara ruler Vatsaraja and the Pala ruler Dharmapala, according to traditional historical accounts.

His campaigns demonstrated that the Rashtrakutas possessed the military strength to challenge the major powers of northern India.

4. Role of Govinda III

Govinda III continued the expansionist policies of his predecessor. He conducted successful campaigns against northern Indian powers and further strengthened Rashtrakuta prestige.

His military achievements showed that the Rashtrakutas were not merely a regional power of the Deccan but an important participant in the wider political affairs of the Indian subcontinent.

5. Role of Indra III

Indra III was another important Rashtrakuta ruler who intervened in northern Indian politics. During his reign, the Rashtrakutas attacked Kannauj and defeated the Gurjara-Pratiharas. This campaign temporarily weakened Pratihara authority and demonstrated the continuing importance of Rashtrakuta military intervention.

6. Results of the struggle

The Tripartite Struggle had several important consequences:

- It weakened the resources of the three competing dynasties through repeated military campaigns.
- It prevented any one dynasty from maintaining permanent supremacy over Kannauj for a long period.
- It demonstrated the political importance of Kannauj in early medieval India.
- It influenced the balance of power between northern and southern Indian kingdoms.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

UNIT- 2

ONE MARK:

A. Pallavas

1. What was the capital of the Pallava dynasty?

Answer: Kanchipuram.

2. Who was Mahendravarman I?

Answer: Mahendravarman I was an important ruler of the Pallava dynasty who ruled in the early seventh century CE.

3. Who was Narasimhavarman I?

Answer: Narasimhavarman I was a famous Pallava ruler who defeated the Chalukya king Pulakesin II.

4. Which Pallava ruler captured Vatapi (Badami)?

Answer: Narasimhavarman I.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

5. What was the title of Narasimhavarman I after his victory over the Chalukyas?

Answer: Vatapikonda, meaning "the conqueror of Vatapi."

6. Name one important contribution of Mahendravarman I to Pallava architecture.

Answer: He promoted rock-cut cave temple architecture.

7. What was the main source of income for the Pallava administration?

Answer: Land revenue.

8. Name one important feature of Pallava administration.

Answer: The kingdom was divided into administrative units for effective governance.

B. Cholas

9. Who was Rajaraja I?

Answer: Rajaraja I was one of the greatest rulers of the Imperial Chola dynasty.

10. What was the capital of the Chola dynasty during the reign of Rajaraja I?

Answer: Thanjavur (Tanjore).

11. Who built the Brihadisvara Temple at Thanjavur?

Answer: Rajaraja I.

12. Who was Rajendra Chola I?

Answer: Rajendra Chola I was the son and successor of Rajaraja I, known for his military expeditions and overseas expansion.

13. Which city was founded by Rajendra Chola I as his new capital?

Answer: Gangaikondacholapuram.

14. What was the basic unit of local administration in the Chola kingdom?

Answer: The village.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

15. What was the name of the Chola village assembly of Brahmin settlements?

Answer: Sabha.

TWO MARK:

1. Who was Mahendravarman I? Mention one of his achievements.

Answer: Mahendravarman I was an important ruler of the Pallava dynasty who ruled in the early seventh century CE. He encouraged rock-cut cave temple architecture and made significant contributions to Pallava culture.

2. Who was Narasimhavarman I? Why is he famous?

Answer: Narasimhavarman I was a powerful Pallava ruler and the son of Mahendravarman I. He is famous for defeating the Chalukya king Pulakesin II and capturing Vatapi (Badami).

3. What was the significance of the title Vatapikonda?

Answer: Vatapikonda means “the conqueror of Vatapi.” The title was adopted by Narasimhavarman I after his victory over the Chalukyas and the capture of their capital, Vatapi.

4. Mention two important features of Pallava administration.

Answer:

- The king was the supreme authority in the administration.
- The kingdom was divided into administrative units, with officials responsible for governance and revenue collection.

5. What was the role of village assemblies under the Pallavas?

Answer: Village assemblies helped manage local affairs, including irrigation, land and community matters. They played an important role in local administration, although their organisation and powers varied.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

6. Mention two important contributions of the Pallavas to architecture.

Answer:

- They encouraged rock-cut cave temples, particularly during the reign of Mahendravarman I.
- They developed structural temples and monumental architecture, especially under Narasimhavarman I and his successors.

7. Why was Kanchipuram important under the Pallavas?

Answer: Kanchipuram was the capital of the Pallava dynasty. It became an important political, religious and cultural centre in southern India.

B. Cholas

8. Who was Rajaraja I? Mention two of his achievements.

Answer: Rajaraja I was one of the greatest rulers of the Imperial Chola dynasty. He expanded the Chola kingdom through military campaigns and built the famous Brihadisvara Temple at Thanjavur.

9. Who was Rajendra Chola I? Mention one of his military achievements.

Answer: Rajendra Chola I was the son and successor of Rajaraja I. He led a northern military expedition towards the Ganga and expanded Chola influence beyond southern India.

10. What was the importance of Gangaikondacholapuram?

Answer: Gangaikondacholapuram was founded by Rajendra Chola I as his new capital. It commemorated his successful northern expedition and became an important political and cultural centre.

11. Mention two features of Chola administration.

Answer:

- The king was the highest authority and supervised the central administration.
- The kingdom was divided into administrative units, while village institutions played an important role in local governance.

12. What was the role of the Sabha in Chola administration?

Answer: The Sabha was the assembly of Brahmin landholders in a Brahmadeya village. It managed local affairs such as land administration, irrigation and the maintenance of village resources.

13. What was the Ur in Chola administration?

Answer: The Ur was the assembly of a common village, generally consisting of its local landholders. It helped manage village affairs and local resources.

14. What was the role of the Nagaram in the Chola period?

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Answer: The Nagaram was an organisation associated with merchants and trading communities. It helped manage commercial activities and represented the interests of traders in urban centres.

15. Mention two important sources of income for the Chola administration.

Answer:

- Land revenue collected from agricultural production.
- Taxes and duties collected from trade and other economic activities.

BROAD ANSWER:

Question 1. Discuss the political history and achievements of Mahendravarman I and Narasimhavarman I.

Answer:

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Introduction

The Pallavas were an important dynasty of early medieval South India. They ruled mainly from Kanchipuram, in present-day Tamil Nadu, and played a significant role in the political, cultural and architectural development of the region. Among their most important rulers were Mahendravarman I and his son Narasimhavarman I, who strengthened the Pallava kingdom and fought major wars against the Chalukyas.

1. Mahendravarman I

Mahendravarman I ruled approximately from 600 to 630 CE. He was an able ruler who contributed to the political and cultural development of the Pallava kingdom. During his reign, the Pallavas faced a major challenge from Pulakesin II, the powerful ruler of the Chalukyas of Badami.

The conflict between the Pallavas and Chalukyas was mainly connected with territorial expansion and political supremacy in the Deccan and southern India. Pulakesin II invaded Pallava territory, and the Pallavas faced military pressure during Mahendravarman's reign. However, Mahendravarman maintained the Pallava kingdom and left a strong foundation for his successor.

Mahendravarman I was also known for his interest in literature, art and architecture. He is associated with the development of rock-cut cave temples in the Pallava kingdom. He is credited with composing the Sanskrit satirical play Mattavilasa Prahasana, which provides insights into religious and social life during his period.

2. Narasimhavarman I

Narasimhavarman I succeeded his father around 630 CE and ruled until approximately 668 CE. He was one of the most powerful Pallava rulers and continued the conflict with the Chalukyas.

His greatest political achievement was his victory over Pulakesin II. Narasimhavarman I launched military campaigns against the Chalukyas and eventually captured their capital, Vatapi (Badami), around 642 CE. Following this victory, he adopted the title Vatapikonda, meaning “the conqueror of Vatapi.”

This victory greatly increased Pallava prestige and weakened Chalukya power for a time. It also demonstrated the military strength of the Pallava kingdom.

3. Conflict with other powers

Narasimhavarman I also strengthened Pallava influence in southern India. He maintained military pressure on rival powers and consolidated his authority over important territories.

His reign was important in the continuing political rivalry between the Pallavas and Chalukyas. Although the struggle continued under later rulers, Narasimhavarman's victory remained one of the most celebrated achievements of the Pallava dynasty.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

4. Cultural contributions

Both rulers contributed to Pallava culture. Mahendravarman I encouraged rock-cut architecture, while Narasimhavarman I is associated with the early development of monumental architecture at Mamallapuram, also known as Mahabalipuram. The site became famous for its rock-cut monuments and sculptural traditions.

Question 2. Explain the main features of the Pallava administrative system.

Answer:

Introduction

The Pallavas ruled important parts of South India from approximately the fourth to the ninth century CE, with Kanchipuram as their principal capital. Their administration helped maintain political stability, collect revenue and manage local affairs. The king occupied the highest position, while ministers, provincial officers and local institutions assisted in governing the kingdom.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

1. Position of the king

The king was the supreme authority in Pallava administration. He was responsible for protecting the kingdom, leading military campaigns, maintaining law and order and supervising revenue collection.

Important rulers such as Mahendravarman I and Narasimhavarman I exercised strong royal authority. The king also supported religious institutions, temples and cultural activities, which strengthened his political position.

2. Central administration

The central administration consisted of ministers, royal officers and other officials who assisted the king. They helped manage government affairs, military matters, revenue collection and relations with neighbouring rulers.

The king made major decisions, while officials carried out administrative responsibilities. Inscriptions provide information about royal grants, officers and administrative practices, although the precise structure of the government changed over time.

3. Provincial administration

The Pallava kingdom was divided into administrative units to make governing the territory easier. Larger territorial divisions were subdivided into smaller units and villages.

Provincial officials were responsible for maintaining order, collecting taxes and implementing royal decisions. This system helped the central government supervise different regions of the kingdom.

The exact names and organisation of administrative divisions could vary across different periods and regions.

4. Village administration

Villages formed an important part of Pallava administration. Local assemblies and village authorities helped manage community affairs, agricultural resources and irrigation facilities.

Village institutions played a role in maintaining local order and resolving certain disputes. However, their organisation and authority varied, and detailed evidence about local administration is not equally available for every region.

5. Revenue administration

Agriculture was the main occupation of the people, making land revenue an important source of state income. The government collected taxes and other dues from agricultural land and economic activities.

Revenue was used to maintain the royal court, support officials, organise military campaigns and provide resources for religious establishments. Land grants to Brahmins and religious institutions were also an important feature of the period.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

6. Military administration

The Pallavas maintained military forces to defend their kingdom and expand their political influence. Their armies included infantry, cavalry and elephants.

Military strength was particularly important because the Pallavas frequently fought against the Chalukyas and other neighbouring powers. The victories of Narasimhavarman I against Pulakesin II demonstrate the importance of military organisation in maintaining Pallava power.

7. Religion and administration

Religious institutions played an important role in Pallava society. The rulers supported Hindu religious traditions, including Shaivism and Vaishnavism, and religious establishments received patronage and land grants.

Temples gradually became important centres of religious, cultural and economic activity. Such institutions contributed to the wider social and economic life of the kingdom.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Question 3. Discuss the political achievements of Rajaraja I, the Great.

Answer:

Introduction

Rajaraja I, also known as Rajaraja the Great, was one of the greatest rulers of the Imperial Chola dynasty. He ruled from approximately 985 to 1014 CE and transformed the Chola kingdom into a powerful empire in South India. His military campaigns, administrative reforms and cultural contributions played a major role in the expansion of Chola power.

1. Expansion of the Chola kingdom

When Rajaraja I ascended the throne, the Cholas were already an important regional power. He followed an active policy of military expansion and strengthened the kingdom through successful campaigns against neighbouring rulers.

He expanded Chola influence in parts of southern India and brought additional territories under his authority. His military achievements increased the resources and prestige of the Chola state.

2. Campaigns against the Pandyas and Cheras

Rajaraja I fought against the Pandyas of southern Tamil Nadu and the Cheras of the Kerala region. These campaigns helped extend Chola influence over important parts of southern India.

Control over these territories was politically and economically significant because the region contained important agricultural areas, trade routes and ports.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

3. Conquest of northern Sri Lanka

Rajaraja I conducted a major military campaign against Sri Lanka. He conquered the northern part of the island and brought it under Chola control. The Cholas established their authority over important territories, while the conquest increased their influence across the Palk Strait.

This campaign laid the foundation for further Chola expansion into Sri Lanka under Rajendra Chola I.

4. Naval strength

Rajaraja I strengthened the Chola navy, which supported military operations across the sea and helped protect maritime interests. Naval power was important because the Cholas were involved in trade across the Bay of Bengal and maintained connections with other regions.

His naval achievements contributed to the growth of Chola influence beyond the mainland, although the most famous overseas campaigns came during his successor's reign.

5. Administrative achievements

Rajaraja I strengthened the administration of his expanding empire. He improved the recording of landholdings and revenue information, helping the government organise taxation and manage its resources.

Chola inscriptions provide valuable evidence about royal orders, land grants, temple endowments and administrative arrangements. Such records helped preserve information about the activities of the state.

6. Brihadisvara Temple

One of Rajaraja I's greatest cultural achievements was the construction of the Brihadisvara Temple at Thanjavur. Dedicated to Shiva, the temple was completed around 1010 CE and represents a remarkable achievement of Chola architecture.

The temple demonstrated royal power, religious devotion and the artistic skills of Chola craftsmen. It also became an important religious and cultural institution.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Question 4. Describe the military achievements and expansion of Rajendra Chola I.

Answer:

Introduction

Rajendra Chola I was the son and successor of Rajaraja I. He ruled from approximately 1014 to 1044 CE and brought the Chola Empire to the height of its power. He continued his father's expansionist policies and conducted military campaigns in northern India, Sri Lanka and Southeast Asia. His reign is remembered for the expansion of Chola political and maritime influence.

1. Expansion in South India

Rajendra Chola I continued the military policies of his father and strengthened Chola control over southern India. He maintained influence over territories in Tamil Nadu and parts of Kerala and continued the struggle against rival powers.

The Cholas also fought the Western Chalukyas, who were major rivals in the Deccan. These conflicts were part of the wider competition for political supremacy in southern India.

2. Northern expedition towards the Ganga

One of Rajendra Chola I's most famous achievements was his military expedition towards northern India. His forces advanced into regions associated with the Gangetic plain and achieved victories against several rulers.

The expedition reached the Ganga region, and water from the sacred river was ceremonially brought back to the Chola kingdom. This victory was an important symbol of imperial prestige.

To commemorate the achievement, Rajendra adopted the title Gangaikondachola, meaning “the Chola who conquered the Ganga.”

3. Foundation of Gangaikondacholapuram

Rajendra Chola I established a new capital called Gangaikondacholapuram. The city commemorated his northern expedition and represented the power and prestige of the Chola Empire.

He also constructed a grand Shiva temple there, inspired by the Brihadisvara Temple at Thanjavur. The new capital became an important political, religious and cultural centre.

4. Conquest of Sri Lanka

Rajendra continued Chola military operations in Sri Lanka. During his reign, Chola forces completed the conquest of the island and captured its ruler, Mahinda V, who was taken to Chola territory.

Control over Sri Lanka strengthened Chola influence across the Palk Strait and provided access to important maritime routes. However, maintaining control over the island remained a challenge, and resistance continued.

5. Naval expedition to Southeast Asia

Around 1025 CE, Rajendra Chola I launched a major naval expedition against Srivijaya, a powerful maritime state in Southeast Asia. The campaign targeted important ports and centres associated with Srivijaya's trading network.

The expedition demonstrated the reach of Chola naval power and the importance of maritime trade in Chola policy. Historians continue to discuss the precise political and commercial motives behind the campaign, but it clearly established the Cholas as a major naval power in the Indian Ocean region.

6. Importance of his military achievements

Rajendra's campaigns expanded Chola prestige beyond southern India. His northern expedition demonstrated the ability of a South Indian ruler to intervene in northern Indian politics, while his overseas campaign showed the strength of the Chola navy.

These achievements also supported the Chola state's commercial and diplomatic connections across the Bay of Bengal.

Question 5. Explain the main features of the Chola administrative system.

Answer:

Introduction

The Chola dynasty developed one of the most notable administrative systems of early medieval South India. Under rulers such as Rajaraja I and Rajendra Chola I, the empire expanded across large parts of southern India and beyond. Its administration combined royal authority, provincial government, revenue collection and local self-government. Village assemblies played a particularly important role in managing local affairs.

1. Position of the king

The king was the highest authority in Chola administration. He controlled the army, supervised officials, issued royal orders and directed military campaigns.

Rajaraja I and Rajendra Chola I strengthened central authority as the empire expanded. Royal inscriptions recorded grants, orders and achievements, helping communicate royal authority across the kingdom.

2. Central administration

The central administration consisted of ministers, royal officials and officers responsible for different government activities. They assisted the king in revenue collection, military affairs, land management and relations with subordinate rulers.

The king exercised supreme authority, but effective governance depended on officials who managed the everyday responsibilities of the state.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

3. Provincial administration

The Chola Empire was divided into administrative units. Important divisions included mandalams (provinces), valanadus and nadus. These divisions helped organise revenue collection and local governance.

Provincial and regional officials supervised administrative work, maintained order and ensured that royal instructions were implemented. The organisation of these divisions changed over time as the empire expanded.

4. Village administration

Village administration was a distinctive feature of the Chola system. Local assemblies managed various community affairs, including land, irrigation and village resources.

Three important institutions were:

- Ur: The assembly associated with a common village.
- Sabha: The assembly of Brahmin landholders in a Brahmadeya village.
- Nagaram: An organisation associated with merchants and trading communities.

These institutions helped manage local affairs and economic activities. Their responsibilities differed according to the type of settlement and the local conditions.

5. The Kudavolai system

The Kudavolai system is particularly associated with the selection of committee members in certain Chola-period village assemblies, especially at Uttaramerur.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Under this system, eligible candidates' names were written on palm leaves and placed in a pot. A name was then selected by drawing a leaf. The inscriptions describing the system also mention eligibility conditions and rules for committee service.

It is important to understand that this was not a modern democratic election. It was a specific method of selecting members for local committees under established social and legal conditions.

6. Revenue administration

Agriculture was the main source of wealth, and land revenue was an important source of state income. The Chola government undertook land surveys and maintained records to assess agricultural resources and organise taxation.

Other taxes and duties were collected from trade and economic activities. Revenue supported the royal administration, military campaigns, public works and religious institutions.

7. Military administration

The Cholas maintained a powerful army consisting of infantry, cavalry and elephants. They also developed a strong navy that supported overseas campaigns and protected maritime interests.

The military was essential for maintaining the empire's territories and conducting campaigns in Sri Lanka and Southeast Asia.

8. Temples and administration

Temples were important religious, economic and cultural institutions. They received land grants and donations, employed workers and supported various activities. Temple inscriptions provide valuable information about landholding, taxation, donations and local society.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

UNIT – 3

ONE MARK:

A. Political Achievements of Dharmapala and Devapala

1. Who founded the Pala dynasty?

Answer: Gopala.

2. Who was Dharmapala?

Answer: Dharmapala was an important ruler of the Pala dynasty who expanded Pala influence in northern India.

3. Who was the successor of Dharmapala?

Answer: Devapala.

4. Which region was the main centre of Pala power?

Answer: Bengal and Bihar.

5. Which three dynasties participated in the Tripartite Struggle for Kannauj?

Answer: The Palas, the Gurjara-Pratiharas and the Rashtrakutas.

6. Name one important achievement of Devapala.

Answer: Devapala expanded the Pala kingdom through successful military campaigns.

B. Cultural Contributions of the Palas

7. Which religion received significant royal patronage under the Palas?

Answer: Buddhism, particularly Mahayana Buddhism.

8. Name one famous Buddhist monastery associated with the Pala period.

Answer: Vikramashila Mahavihara.

9. Who is traditionally credited with founding Vikramashila Mahavihara?

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Answer: Dharmapala.

10. Name one important centre of Buddhist learning associated with the Palas.

Answer: Nalanda Mahavihara.

11. Which art form flourished under the Palas?

Answer: Sculpture and bronze art.

C. Sena Dynasty: Ballal Sena and Lakshman Sena

12. Who was Ballal Sena?

Answer: Ballal Sena was an important ruler of the Sena dynasty of Bengal.

13. Who succeeded Ballal Sena?

Answer: Lakshman Sena.

14. Name one literary work traditionally associated with Ballal Sena.

Answer: Danasagara.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

15. Which ruler of the Sena dynasty was defeated by Bakhtiyar Khalji around 1204 CE?

Answer: Lakshman Sena.

TWO MARK:

A. Political Achievements of Dharmapala and Devapala

1. Who was Dharmapala? Mention one of his political achievements.

Answer: Dharmapala was one of the most powerful rulers of the Pala dynasty of Bengal and Bihar. He expanded Pala influence in northern India and played an important role in the Tripartite Struggle for Kannauj.

2. Mention two important achievements of Devapala.

Answer:

- Devapala expanded the Pala kingdom through military campaigns.
- He strengthened the political influence of the Palas and supported Buddhist religious institutions.

3. What was the Tripartite Struggle?

Answer: The Tripartite Struggle was a prolonged conflict among the Palas, Gurjara-Pratiharas and Rashtrakutas for control over Kannauj. It was an important political event in early medieval Indian history.

4. Why was Kannauj important during the Pala period?

Answer: Kannauj was an important political and strategic centre in northern India. Control over the city represented political prestige and helped a dynasty establish influence over northern Indian territories.

5. What was the importance of the Pala dynasty in Bengal and Bihar?

Answer: The Pala dynasty established a powerful kingdom in Bengal and Bihar. Its rulers strengthened regional political authority and encouraged Buddhism, education and cultural development.

CAREERSTUDY
The Learning App

B. Cultural Contributions of the Palas

6. Mention two cultural contributions of the Palas.

Answer:

- The Palas encouraged Buddhist learning and supported monasteries such as Nalanda and Vikramashila.
- They promoted sculpture, bronze art and architectural development.

7. What was the importance of Vikramashila Mahavihara?

Answer: Vikramashila Mahavihara was an important Buddhist centre of higher learning founded under the patronage of Dharmapala. It attracted scholars and students and contributed to the spread of Buddhist philosophy.

8. How did the Palas contribute to Buddhism?

Answer: The Pala rulers patronised Buddhist monasteries and educational institutions. Their support helped preserve Buddhist learning and encouraged the spread of Buddhist ideas to other parts of Asia.

9. Mention two important centres of learning associated with the Pala period.

Answer: Nalanda Mahavihara and Vikramashila Mahavihara were two important Buddhist centres of learning associated with the Pala period.

10. What were the main features of Pala art?

Answer: Pala art was known for finely carved stone sculptures and bronze images of Buddhist and Hindu deities. It displayed detailed ornamentation, graceful figures and high artistic skill.

C. Sena Dynasty: Ballal Sena and Lakshman Sena

11. Who was Ballal Sena? Mention one of his contributions.

Answer: Ballal Sena was an important ruler of the Sena dynasty of Bengal. He is traditionally associated with the composition of Danasagara and with social and religious developments during the Sena period.

12. Who was Lakshman Sena? Mention one important event of his reign.

Answer: Lakshman Sena was a prominent ruler of the Sena dynasty and the son of Ballal Sena. During his reign, Bakhtiyar Khalji captured Nadia around 1204 CE, weakening Sena authority in Bengal.

13. What was the importance of Danasagara?

Answer: Danasagara is a Sanskrit work traditionally attributed to Ballal Sena. It discusses religious donations and related practices, reflecting the religious and literary traditions of the period.

14. Mention two features of Sena rule in Bengal.

Answer:

- The Sena rulers strengthened their political authority in parts of Bengal after the decline of Pala power.
- They patronised Sanskrit literature and Hindu religious traditions.

15. How did the Sena dynasty lose power in Bengal?

Answer: The Sena dynasty was weakened by the military campaigns of Bakhtiyar Khalji, who captured Nadia around 1204 CE during Lakshman Sena's reign. However, Sena rulers continued to exercise authority in parts of eastern Bengal for some time.

BROAD ANSWER:

Question 1. Discuss the political achievements of Dharmapala.

Answer:

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Introduction

Dharmapala was one of the greatest rulers of the Pala dynasty of Bengal and Bihar. He ruled during the late eighth and early ninth centuries CE and played an important role in expanding Pala political influence in northern India. His military campaigns and involvement in the Tripartite Struggle made the Palas one of the major powers of early medieval India.

1. Expansion of the Pala kingdom

Dharmapala succeeded Gopala, the founder of the Pala dynasty. He strengthened the kingdom established by his predecessor and expanded Pala influence over important territories in northern India.

His reign marked a period of political growth for the Palas. Through military campaigns and political alliances, he attempted to establish Pala supremacy beyond Bengal and Bihar.

2. The Tripartite Struggle

One of the most important events during Dharmapala's reign was the Tripartite Struggle for control over Kannauj. The three powers involved were:

- The Palas of Bengal and Bihar.
- The Gurjara-Pratiharas of northern and western India.
- The Rashtrakutas of the Deccan.

Kannauj was a major political centre, and control over it represented prestige and influence over northern India. Dharmapala attempted to extend his authority over the region, bringing him into conflict with the Gurjara-Pratiharas.

3. Conflict with the Gurjara-Pratiharas

Dharmapala faced opposition from the Gurjara-Pratihara ruler Vatsaraja. Historical accounts indicate that Vatsaraja initially defeated Dharmapala, but the political situation changed following the intervention of the Rashtrakuta ruler Dhruva.

Dhruva defeated important northern Indian powers during his campaign. After the Rashtrakutas withdrew towards the Deccan, Dharmapala was able to regain influence and continue his efforts to expand Pala authority.

These changing alliances and military campaigns demonstrate the competitive nature of early medieval Indian politics.

4. Intervention in Kannauj

Dharmapala attempted to influence the political situation at Kannauj. According to the account of his achievements, he supported the installation of a ruler at Kannauj and gained recognition from several subordinate rulers.

Although this did not result in permanent Pala control over the city, it demonstrated Dharmapala's ambition to establish imperial supremacy in northern India.

5. Consolidation of power

Dharmapala strengthened Pala authority in Bengal and Bihar while extending his influence into neighbouring regions. His military and diplomatic activities increased the prestige of the dynasty.

He also supported Buddhist institutions, including Vikramashila Mahavihara, traditionally attributed to his patronage. This religious and cultural support helped strengthen the Pala rulers' position in society.

Question 2. Describe the political achievements of Devapala.

Answer:

Introduction

Devapala was one of the most powerful rulers of the Pala dynasty of Bengal and Bihar. He succeeded Dharmapala in the early ninth century CE and continued the expansionist policies of his predecessor. His reign is generally regarded as a period of considerable political strength for the Palas. He expanded the kingdom, conducted military campaigns and supported religious and educational institutions.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

1. Expansion of the Pala kingdom

Devapala inherited a powerful kingdom from Dharmapala. He worked to strengthen the political authority of the Palas and expand their influence over neighbouring regions.

Through military campaigns, he sought to maintain control over Bengal and Bihar and extend Pala influence into other parts of northern India. His achievements helped preserve the dynasty's position among the major powers of early medieval India.

2. Military campaigns

Devapala is credited in Pala inscriptions and later historical accounts with conducting successful military expeditions against several neighbouring rulers. His campaigns are described as extending Pala influence towards regions such as Assam, Odisha and parts of northern India.

However, the precise extent and permanence of these conquests are debated by historians. Such claims should be understood in the context of royal inscriptions, which often presented a ruler's achievements in highly impressive terms.

Despite these limitations, the evidence indicates that Devapala was an ambitious ruler who sought to strengthen Pala supremacy.

3. Relations with the Gurjara-Pratiharas

The Palas continued to compete with the Gurjara-Pratiharas during Devapala's reign. Both dynasties sought political influence over important parts of northern India.

This rivalry was connected with the broader Tripartite Struggle for Kannauj, in which the Rashtrakutas also participated. Devapala's military activities helped maintain the position of the Palas within this competitive political environment.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

4. Strengthening Pala authority

Devapala maintained the political strength established under Gopala and Dharmapala. The Pala kingdom continued to be a major power in Bengal and Bihar, and his reign is often associated with the high point of Pala expansion.

His military campaigns and royal patronage contributed to the prestige of the dynasty. Nevertheless, like other early medieval rulers, he depended on subordinate chiefs and regional authorities to maintain control over distant territories.

5. Patronage of Buddhism

Devapala also supported Buddhist religious and educational institutions. His reign is associated with the continued importance of Buddhist monasteries and centres of learning in eastern India.

An important example of his religious patronage is the grant of five villages to the Buddhist monastery at Nalanda, reportedly made at the request of Balaputradeva, the ruler of Srivijaya. This is significant evidence of diplomatic and religious connections between eastern India and Southeast Asia.

6. Historical importance

Devapala's reign demonstrated the strength of the Pala dynasty during the ninth century. His military campaigns enhanced its prestige, while his support for Buddhist institutions strengthened its cultural influence.

Question 3. Explain the major cultural contributions of the Pala dynasty.

Answer:

Introduction

The Pala dynasty ruled Bengal and Bihar from approximately the eighth to the twelfth century CE. Besides their political achievements, the Palas made important contributions to Indian culture, especially Buddhism, education, literature, sculpture and architecture. Their patronage helped eastern India become one of the major centres of Buddhist learning and artistic development.

1. Patronage of Buddhism

The Palas were particularly well known for their support of Buddhism, especially Mahayana Buddhism. Several Pala rulers, including Dharmapala and Devapala, supported Buddhist monasteries and religious institutions.

Their patronage helped preserve Buddhist teachings and encouraged scholars to study philosophy, logic and religious texts. Buddhism also received support from royal grants and donations that provided resources for monasteries.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Although the Palas supported Buddhism, Hindu religious traditions also continued to flourish during their rule.

2. Development of educational institutions

The Pala period was an important age for higher learning in eastern India. Buddhist monasteries served not only as religious centres but also as institutions for education and scholarship.

Nalanda Mahavihara remained an important centre of Buddhist learning during the Pala period. Scholars from different regions studied Buddhist philosophy, grammar, logic and other subjects there.

Vikramashila Mahavihara was traditionally founded under the patronage of Dharmapala. It became a renowned centre of Buddhist scholarship and attracted students and teachers from different parts of Asia.

Somapura Mahavihara, at Paharpur in present-day Bangladesh, is another outstanding example of Pala-period religious and architectural development. It is associated with Dharmapala's reign and reflects the importance of large monastic complexes.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

3. Architecture

The Palas made significant contributions to religious architecture. Buddhist monasteries and temples were constructed with carefully planned layouts, courtyards, shrines and decorated walls.

Somapura Mahavihara is one of the best examples of Pala architecture. Its large quadrangular plan and central shrine demonstrate the architectural skills of the period.

Pala architectural traditions also influenced Buddhist monuments in neighbouring regions, including parts of Southeast Asia.

4. Sculpture and bronze art

Pala sculpture is famous for its fine workmanship and detailed ornamentation. Sculptors created images of the Buddha, Bodhisattvas, Hindu gods and goddesses.

Stone sculptures often display graceful figures, elaborate jewellery and carefully carved backgrounds. Bronze images were also produced using advanced metalworking techniques.

These artistic traditions influenced the development of religious sculpture in Nepal and Tibet and contributed to the wider spread of eastern Indian artistic styles.

5. Literature and scholarship

The Pala period encouraged the study of Buddhist philosophy, Sanskrit and other scholarly traditions. Buddhist teachers and writers produced religious and philosophical works, while monasteries preserved manuscripts and supported intellectual activity.

The activities of scholars helped maintain connections between eastern India and other Buddhist regions of Asia.

6. Religious and cultural influence

The Palas' support for Buddhist institutions encouraged the movement of scholars and religious teachers across borders. Their cultural influence extended beyond Bengal and Bihar through religious exchanges, manuscripts and artistic traditions.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Question 4. Discuss the achievements of Ballal Sena and explain the main features of Sena rule.

Answer:

Introduction

The Sena dynasty became an important ruling power in Bengal after the decline of Pala political authority. The Senas strengthened their position in parts of Bengal and supported Hindu religious traditions and Sanskrit literature. Ballal Sena was one of the prominent rulers of the dynasty and is remembered for his religious interests, literary contributions and association with social traditions in Bengal.

1. Rise of the Sena dynasty

The Sena dynasty gradually increased its influence in Bengal during the later Pala period. Vijayasena was particularly important in establishing Sena political supremacy and expanding the dynasty's territories.

Ballal Sena succeeded Vijayasena and continued to strengthen the position of the dynasty. His reign formed part of the transition from Pala dominance to Sena rule in Bengal.

2. Political achievements

Ballal Sena maintained the authority established by his predecessor and helped consolidate Sena rule. The dynasty exercised influence over important parts of Bengal, although the extent of its control varied across different regions.

The Sena rulers relied on royal officials, local chiefs and landed groups to govern their territories. Their administration, like that of other early medieval kingdoms, combined central royal authority with local power structures.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

3. Religious policies

Ballal Sena is traditionally associated with the promotion of Hindu religious practices and Brahmanical social traditions. He is also linked in later accounts with the development of Kulinism, a system of social ranking associated with certain Brahmin and Kayastha groups in Bengal.

However, historians debate the precise origins and extent of Ballal Sena's role in establishing this system. Therefore, it is best understood as a tradition associated with his reign rather than as an entirely certain administrative reform.

4. Literary contributions

Ballal Sena is traditionally credited with composing Danasagara, a Sanskrit work dealing with religious donations and related practices.

The work reflects the importance of religious learning and Sanskrit scholarship among the Sena rulers. The dynasty supported Brahmanical scholars and contributed to the continuation of Sanskrit literary traditions in Bengal.

5. Administration and economy

The Sena rulers maintained an agrarian-based economy in which land revenue was an important source of income. Royal authority depended on the collection of taxes, the management of land and cooperation with local authorities.

Agriculture supported the population and provided resources for the court and religious institutions. Trade and other economic activities also contributed to the prosperity of Bengal.

6. Cultural significance

The Sena period was important for the development of Hindu religious traditions and Sanskrit learning in Bengal. Royal patronage encouraged religious institutions, scholars and literary activity.

At the same time, the region retained diverse religious and cultural traditions, and the historical development of Bengal cannot be explained through royal policies alone.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Question 5. Discuss the reign of Lakshman Sena and explain the decline of the Sena dynasty.

Answer:

Introduction

Lakshman Sena was one of the most prominent rulers of the Sena dynasty of Bengal. He was the son of Ballal Sena and ruled during the late twelfth and early thirteenth centuries CE. His reign is remembered for literary and cultural developments as well as the political challenges that followed the expansion of Turkish military power into eastern India.

1. Accession and political position

Lakshman Sena succeeded Ballal Sena and inherited a kingdom that exercised considerable influence in Bengal. The Sena rulers had strengthened their authority following the decline of the Palas.

Lakshman Sena continued to maintain royal power and sought to preserve the territories under Sena control. However, his reign took place during a period of political change, as new military powers expanded into northern and eastern India.

2. Military and political activities

Traditional accounts associate Lakshman Sena with military achievements and the expansion of Sena influence. Inscriptions and literary sources indicate that the Sena rulers maintained an important political position in Bengal.

Nevertheless, the kingdom faced growing challenges from Turkish military expeditions advancing into eastern India. The political situation became increasingly difficult as the Sena rulers attempted to defend their territories.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

3. Cultural contributions

Lakshman Sena's court was associated with Sanskrit literature and scholarly activity. Several important poets and scholars flourished during the Sena period.

The celebrated Sanskrit poet Jayadeva, traditionally associated with the composition of Gita Govinda, is often connected with Lakshman Sena's court. The work describes the love of Radha and Krishna and became highly influential in Indian devotional literature and the arts.

Other poets associated with the literary environment of the period include Dhoyi and Govardhana. Their works reflect the continued importance of Sanskrit poetry and royal patronage in Bengal.

4. Bakhtiyar Khalji's invasion

One of the most important events of Lakshman Sena's reign was the invasion of Bengal by Muhammad Bakhtiyar Khalji, a Turkish military commander associated with the expansion of Ghurid power in northern India.

Around 1204 CE, Bakhtiyar Khalji captured Nadia, an important political centre associated with the Sena rulers. Historical accounts describe the attack as sudden, contributing to the disruption of Sena authority in western Bengal.

Lakshman Sena withdrew towards eastern Bengal rather than losing all his territories immediately. Sena rule continued in parts of eastern Bengal for some time after the capture of Nadia.

5. Causes of Sena decline

Several factors contributed to the decline of the Sena dynasty:

- Military pressure: The expansion of Turkish military power challenged Sena control over Bengal.
- Loss of important centres: The capture of Nadia weakened Sena authority in western Bengal.
- Political changes: New ruling powers emerged and established control over important territories.
- Regional resistance and fragmentation: Maintaining authority over a large territory became increasingly difficult as political conditions changed.

The decline was gradual rather than an immediate disappearance of the dynasty.

6. Historical importance

Lakshman Sena's reign represents an important transition in the history of Bengal. It witnessed the continuation of Sanskrit literary traditions alongside major political changes that transformed the region's ruling structures.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

UNIT – 4

ONE MARK:

A. Pratiharas: Mihirabhoja and Administration

1. Who was the founder of the Gurjara-Pratihara dynasty?

Answer: Nagabhata I.

2. Who was Mihirabhoja?

Answer: Mihirabhoja was one of the greatest rulers of the Gurjara-Pratihara dynasty.

3. What was the title of Mihirabhoja?

Answer: Adivaraha.

4. Which city became an important political centre of the Gurjara-Pratiharas?

Answer: Kannauj.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

5. What was the main source of income of the Pratihara administration?

Answer: Land revenue.

B. Tripartite Struggle: Pratihara–Pala–Rashtrakuta

6. What was the Tripartite Struggle?

Answer: It was a prolonged political conflict among the Pratiharas, Palas and Rashtrakutas for control over Kannauj.

7. Which three dynasties participated in the Tripartite Struggle?

Answer: The Gurjara-Pratiharas, Palas and Rashtrakutas.

8. Why was Kannauj important in the Tripartite Struggle?

Answer: Kannauj was an important political and strategic centre in northern India.

9. Name one Rashtrakuta ruler who participated in the Tripartite Struggle.

Answer: Dhruva.

10. Name one Pala ruler associated with the Tripartite Struggle.

Answer: Dharmapala.

C. The Gahadavalas: Political Achievements

11. Who was the founder of the Gahadavala dynasty?

Answer: Chandradeva.

12. Which region was the main centre of Gahadavala power?

Answer: Kannauj and parts of the Gangetic plain.

13. Who was the most famous ruler of the Gahadavala dynasty?

Answer: Govindachandra.

14. Which Gahadavala ruler fought against Muhammad Ghori in 1194 CE?

Answer: Jayachandra.

15. Which battle in 1194 CE weakened Gahadavala power?

Answer: The Battle of Chandawar.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

TWO MARK:

1. Who founded the Gurjara-Pratihara dynasty?

Answer: Nagabhata I is generally regarded as the founder of the Gurjara-Pratihara dynasty. He established Pratihara power in western India during the 8th century.

2. Who was Mihirabhoja?

Answer: Mihirabhoja was one of the greatest rulers of the Gurjara-Pratihara dynasty. He strengthened the kingdom and expanded its political influence in northern India.

3. What was the title of Mihirabhoja?

Answer: Mihirabhoja was known by the title Adivaraha. This title is associated with the Varaha incarnation of Lord Vishnu.

4. What was the importance of Kannauj to the Pratiharas?

Answer: Kannauj was an important political and strategic centre in northern India. Control over Kannauj increased a ruler's prestige and influence over the Gangetic plains.

5. Mention two main features of Pratihara administration.

Answer:

- The king was the head of the administration.
- The kingdom was divided into administrative units for effective governance, and officials helped the king manage revenue and law and order.

6. What was the Tripartite Struggle?

Answer: The Tripartite Struggle was a prolonged conflict among the Gurjara-Pratiharas, Palas and Rashtrakutas. The main objective was to gain control over Kannauj.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

7. Name the three dynasties involved in the Tripartite Struggle.

Answer: The three dynasties were:

1. Gurjara-Pratiharas of northern and western India.
2. Palas of Bengal and Bihar.
3. Rashtrakutas of the Deccan.

8. Why was Kannauj important in the Tripartite Struggle?

Answer: Kannauj was located in the fertile Gangetic plains and held great political importance. Control over it provided prestige, resources and influence in northern India.

9. Mention two Rashtrakuta rulers associated with the Tripartite Struggle.

Answer: Dhruva and Govinda III were important Rashtrakuta rulers involved in the struggle for Kannauj. Their campaigns weakened the power of rival dynasties.

10. Name two Pala rulers associated with the Tripartite Struggle.

Answer: Dharmapala and Devapala were two powerful rulers of the Pala dynasty. Dharmapala played an important role in the struggle to establish influence over Kannauj.

11. Who founded the Gahadavala dynasty?

Answer: Chandradeva founded the Gahadavala dynasty in the late 11th century. He established Gahadavala authority in parts of northern India, particularly around Kannauj and Varanasi.

12. Who was Govindachandra?

Answer: Govindachandra was one of the most powerful rulers of the Gahadavala dynasty. During his reign, the kingdom became politically influential and prosperous.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

13. Who was Jayachandra?

Answer: Jayachandra was a prominent ruler of the Gahadavala dynasty. He ruled over parts of northern India and fought against Muhammad Ghori's forces in 1194 CE.

14. What was the Battle of Chandawar?

Answer: The Battle of Chandawar was fought in 1194 CE between Muhammad Ghori and Jayachandra. Jayachandra was defeated, weakening Gahadavala power in northern India.

15. Mention two political achievements of the Gahadavala dynasty.

Answer:

- The Gahadavalas established strong political authority over parts of the Gangetic plains.

- Under rulers such as Govindachandra, the dynasty expanded its influence and supported religious and cultural activities.

BROAD ANSWER:

Question 1. Discuss the political achievements of Mihirabhoja.

Answer

Introduction

Mihirabhoja was one of the greatest rulers of the Gurjara-Pratihara dynasty. He ruled during the 9th century CE and played an important role in strengthening Pratihara power in northern India. He is generally dated to approximately 836–885 CE. Under his leadership, the Pratihara kingdom became a major political power and competed with the Palas and Rashtrakutas for control over Kannauj.

1. Expansion of the Kingdom

Mihirabhoja worked to expand and strengthen his kingdom. His authority extended over large parts of northern and western India. Through military campaigns and political activities, he increased the influence of the Pratiharas in the Gangetic plains and neighbouring regions.

His expansion helped establish the Pratiharas as one of the most powerful dynasties of northern India during the 9th century.

2. Struggle for Kannauj

Kannauj was one of the most important political centres of northern India. It was situated in the fertile Gangetic plains and had great strategic and economic importance.

Mihirabhoja tried to establish and maintain Pratihara control over Kannauj. The city was also desired by the Pala dynasty of Bengal and Bihar and the Rashtrakuta dynasty of the Deccan. The competition among these three dynasties became known as the Tripartite Struggle.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Mihirabhoja's efforts helped the Pratiharas strengthen their position in this long political contest.

3. Conflict with the Palas and Rashtrakutas

The Palas and Rashtrakutas were powerful rivals of the Pratiharas. Mihirabhoja had to defend his kingdom against their attempts to expand their influence in northern India.

His military campaigns helped preserve Pratihara power and maintain its position as a leading dynasty. Although the struggle continued for generations, Mihirabhoja's reign marked an important period of Pratihara strength.

4. Title of Adivaraha

Mihirabhoja was known by the title Adivaraha. The title referred to Varaha, the boar incarnation of Lord Vishnu. It reflected the religious and political traditions of the period.

Coins associated with Mihirabhoja also provide evidence of his royal authority and religious associations.

CAREER STUDY
the Learning App

5. Administration and Economy

Mihirabhoja maintained an organised system of administration. The king stood at the head of the government, while officials helped manage the kingdom's affairs. Land revenue was an important source of income, which supported the administration and military.

A strong military was essential for protecting the kingdom, maintaining control over territories and conducting campaigns against rival powers.

6. Historical Importance

Mihirabhoja's reign represented a high point in the history of the Gurjara-Pratiharas. His military and political achievements increased the prestige of the dynasty. His successors inherited a kingdom that remained an important force in northern Indian politics.

Question 2. Explain the main features of the administration of the Gurjara-Pratiharas.

Answer

Introduction

The Gurjara-Pratiharas were one of the major dynasties of early medieval northern India. Their kingdom reached great power under rulers such as Mihirabhoja. The administration of the Pratiharas was based on monarchy, the assistance of officials, territorial divisions, land revenue and military organisation. Their administrative system helped them govern a large kingdom and defend it against rival powers.

1. The King

The king was the head of the administration. He exercised authority over political, military and administrative affairs. He was responsible for protecting the kingdom, maintaining law and order, collecting revenue and leading or organising military campaigns.

Powerful rulers such as Mihirabhoja strengthened the authority of the monarchy and expanded the political influence of the dynasty.

2. Ministers and Officials

The king was assisted by ministers and other officials in governing the kingdom. These officials helped manage revenue collection, military affairs, administration and other responsibilities.

The exact organisation of the administration could vary across regions and reigns. However, royal officers played an important role in carrying out the king's orders and maintaining control over the kingdom.

3. Provincial and Local Administration

The Pratihara kingdom covered a large geographical area. For administrative convenience, territories were governed through different levels of local and regional authority.

Provincial officers and local authorities helped manage the affairs of their respective areas. Local institutions and influential groups also played a role in the administration of villages and towns.

In some regions, subordinate rulers and local chiefs retained considerable authority while recognising the supremacy of the Pratihara king.

4. Land Revenue

Agriculture was the main occupation of most people, making land revenue an important source of state income. Revenue collected from agricultural land helped support the royal administration and military.

The amount of revenue depended on local conditions, agricultural production and established customs. Land grants were also an important feature of early medieval India, and grants to religious institutions or individuals could affect the distribution of revenue rights.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

5. Military Organisation

The military was essential for the protection and expansion of the Pratihara kingdom. The army included different types of forces, particularly infantry, cavalry and elephants.

Cavalry was especially important in warfare during this period. The king needed a strong military to protect the kingdom from external attacks, suppress rebellions and compete with the Palas and Rashtrakutas.

Subordinate rulers and local chiefs could also provide military support when required.

6. Law and Order

Maintaining peace and security was an important responsibility of the king and his officials. The administration worked to protect settlements, preserve royal authority and settle disputes.

Local authorities and established customs played a role in resolving many everyday disputes. Religious institutions and local communities also influenced social life.

7. Economic and Cultural Support

The Pratihara rulers benefited from agriculture, trade and urban centres. Cities such as Kannauj were important centres of political and economic activity.

The dynasty also supported religious and cultural traditions. Temples and other religious institutions formed an important part of society during this period.

Question 3. What was the Tripartite Struggle? Discuss its causes and results.

Answer

Introduction

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

The Tripartite Struggle was one of the most important political developments in early medieval Indian history. It was a prolonged conflict among three powerful dynasties: the Gurjara-Pratiharas, the Palas and the Rashtrakutas. The main objective was to gain control over Kannauj, an important political centre in northern India. The struggle continued through several generations, particularly during the 8th, 9th and early 10th centuries.

1. The Three Dynasties

The three dynasties involved in the struggle were:

- Gurjara-Pratiharas: They established power over parts of western and northern India and became major rivals for control of Kannauj.
- Palas: They ruled over Bengal and Bihar. Important rulers included Dharmapala and Devapala.

- Rashtrakutas: They ruled over a large part of the Deccan. Important rulers involved in the conflict included Dhruva and Govinda III.

Each dynasty wanted to increase its political influence in northern India.

2. Importance of Kannauj

Kannauj was the main centre of the struggle. It was situated in the fertile Gangetic plains and had strategic and economic importance.

Control over Kannauj offered prestige and influence over important regions of northern India. It also helped rulers strengthen their claims to political supremacy.

For these reasons, all three dynasties attempted to establish their authority over the city.

3. Causes of the Struggle

The first major cause was the desire for political supremacy. Each dynasty wanted to become the most powerful force in northern India.

The second cause was the strategic importance of Kannauj. Its geographical position made it valuable for controlling surrounding territories and important routes.

The third cause was economic interest. The fertile Gangetic plains supported agriculture and generated revenue. Control over this region could strengthen a kingdom's resources.

Finally, the ambitions of powerful rulers encouraged repeated military campaigns. When one dynasty established influence over Kannauj, the others often attempted to challenge it.

4. Course of the Struggle

Dharmapala of the Pala dynasty attempted to extend his influence over Kannauj. However, the Gurjara-Pratiharas also sought to control the city.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

The Rashtrakutas intervened in northern Indian politics through military campaigns. Dhruva and Govinda III were important Rashtrakuta rulers who challenged the powers of northern India.

The Pratiharas gradually strengthened their position under rulers such as Nagabhata II and Mihirabhoja. Mihirabhoja was particularly important in restoring and expanding Pratihara influence.

The struggle was not one continuous war. It consisted of several campaigns and changing political alliances over many decades.

5. Results of the Struggle

First, it weakened all three dynasties. Repeated military campaigns required considerable resources and prevented lasting political stability.

Second, the Pratiharas gained considerable influence. Under powerful rulers, they established themselves as a leading dynasty in northern India, although their control was not permanent everywhere.

Third, the Palas maintained their importance in eastern India. Despite their competition for Kannauj, they continued to rule over Bengal and Bihar.

Fourth, the Rashtrakutas demonstrated their military strength. Their interventions showed that the Deccan powers could influence political developments in northern India.

Finally, the struggle contributed to political fragmentation. Over time, regional powers gained greater independence as the major dynasties weakened.

Question 4. Discuss the political achievements of the Gahadavala dynasty.

Answer

Introduction

The Gahadavala dynasty was an important ruling dynasty of northern India during the 11th and 12th centuries. It established its authority over parts of the Gangetic plains, particularly around Kannauj and Varanasi. The dynasty played a significant role in the politics of northern India before the expansion of Turkish power under Muhammad Ghori.

Important Gahadavala rulers included Chandradeva, Madanapala, Govindachandra and Jayachandra.

1. Foundation of the Dynasty

Chandradeva is generally regarded as the founder of the Gahadavala dynasty as a major political power. He established his authority in parts of northern India during the late 11th century.

His achievements included strengthening the kingdom and establishing control over important territories in the Gangetic region. His success provided a foundation for the expansion of Gahadavala power under his successors.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

2. Expansion under Chandradeva

Chandradeva worked to establish a strong kingdom in northern India. His authority extended over important areas around Kannauj and Varanasi.

These regions were politically and economically significant. Their agricultural resources and strategic location helped support the growth of the dynasty.

Chandradeva's achievements helped the Gahadavalas emerge as a major regional power.

3. Govindachandra's Achievements

Govindachandra was one of the greatest rulers of the Gahadavala dynasty. During his reign, the kingdom reached a high level of political influence.

He maintained authority over important parts of the Gangetic plains and strengthened the position of the dynasty. His reign is also associated with economic activity, religious patronage and cultural development.

Copper-plate inscriptions and other historical records provide information about Gahadavala administration, land grants and royal activities during this period.

4. Administration and Revenue

The Gahadavala kingdom was governed by a monarchy headed by the king. Royal officers helped manage administrative affairs, collect revenue and maintain law and order.

Agriculture was the main economic activity, and land revenue was an important source of income. Land grants to religious institutions and individuals also formed part of the political and social system.

The administration depended on local authorities and officials to maintain control over different regions.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

5. Religious and Cultural Contributions

The Gahadavala rulers supported religious institutions and cultural activities. Varanasi, an important religious centre, received considerable attention during this period.

Royal patronage helped religious institutions maintain their position in society. Inscriptions also provide evidence of donations and grants made by rulers and other influential people.

The growth of religious and cultural activity contributed to the importance of the Gahadavala kingdom.

6. Jayachandra and the Turkish Invasion

Jayachandra was one of the best-known rulers of the Gahadavala dynasty. He ruled during a period when Turkish military power was expanding in northern India.

In 1194 CE, Jayachandra fought Muhammad Ghori at the Battle of Chandawar. Jayachandra was defeated, and the defeat seriously weakened Gahadavala political power.

The battle formed part of the larger process through which Turkish rulers expanded their influence in northern India.

Question 5. Write an account of the rise and decline of the Gahadavala dynasty.

Answer

Introduction

The Gahadavala dynasty was a significant regional power in northern India during the 11th and 12th centuries. It ruled over important parts of the Gangetic plains, especially the regions around Kannauj and Varanasi. The dynasty rose during a period when several regional kingdoms competed for political supremacy. Its history is associated with rulers such as Chandradeva, Govindachandra and Jayachandra.

CAREER STUDY
the Learning App

1. Rise of the Dynasty

The rise of the Gahadavalas began under Chandradeva in the late 11th century. He established his authority over parts of northern India and strengthened the political position of his family.

Kannauj and Varanasi were important centres because of their strategic locations, agricultural resources and cultural significance. Control over these regions helped the Gahadavalas develop a strong regional kingdom.

Chandradeva's success laid the foundation for the expansion of the dynasty under later rulers.

2. Expansion and Consolidation

The Gahadavalas strengthened their political influence by controlling important territories in the Gangetic plains. Their power depended on military strength, revenue collection and cooperation with local authorities.

The kingdom's agricultural resources supported its administration and military. Land revenue was an important source of income, while grants to religious institutions were part of the political and social system.

The dynasty became one of the important powers in northern India during the 12th century.

3. Govindachandra's Reign

Govindachandra was among the most powerful rulers of the dynasty. During his reign, Gahadavala authority reached a high point.

He maintained control over important regions and strengthened the political prestige of the kingdom. His reign is also associated with religious patronage and cultural activity.

Varanasi was an important centre of religious learning, while the kingdom's agricultural and commercial resources supported its prosperity.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Govindachandra's achievements made the Gahadavalas an influential power in northern India.

4. Jayachandra's Rule

Jayachandra was another prominent ruler of the Gahadavala dynasty. He governed during a period of increasing military pressure from Turkish forces entering northern India.

The political situation had become challenging because different regional kingdoms were competing for power. The expansion of Muhammad Ghori's forces created a major threat to the existing kingdoms of northern India.

Jayachandra attempted to defend his kingdom against this growing challenge.

5. Battle of Chandawar, 1194 CE

The most important event associated with the decline of the Gahadavalas was the Battle of Chandawar in 1194 CE. In this battle, Muhammad Ghori defeated Jayachandra.

The defeat weakened the military and political position of the Gahadavala dynasty. It also helped Muhammad Ghori extend his influence in the Gangetic region.

However, the dynasty's decline should be understood as a process rather than the result of one battle alone. The wider expansion of Turkish power and the changing political situation in northern India also contributed to the loss of Gahadavala authority.

6. Causes of Decline

Several factors contributed to the decline of the Gahadavalas.

- Military defeat: Jayachandra's defeat at Chandawar weakened the kingdom.
- Expansion of Turkish power: Muhammad Ghori's campaigns changed the political balance in northern India.
- Political competition: Regional kingdoms often competed with one another, making coordinated resistance difficult.
- Loss of important territories: Military defeats reduced the dynasty's control over strategically important regions.

These developments gradually reduced Gahadavala influence.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

UNIT – 5

ONE MARK:

A. Arab Invasion of Sindh

1. Who led the Arab invasion of Sindh in 712 CE?

Answer: Muhammad bin Qasim.

2. Who was the ruler of Sindh during the Arab invasion?

Answer: Raja Dahir.

3. In which year did the Arab conquest of Sindh take place?

Answer: 712 CE.

4. Which Arab ruler sent Muhammad bin Qasim to invade Sindh?

Answer: Al-Hajjaj ibn Yusuf, the governor of Iraq under the Umayyad Caliphate.

5. Mention one important effect of the Arab invasion of Sindh.

Answer: It established Arab political control over parts of Sindh and introduced Islam more firmly into the region.

B. Invasions of Mahmud of Ghazni

6. Who was Mahmud of Ghazni?

Answer: Mahmud of Ghazni was a ruler of the Ghaznavid dynasty who conducted repeated invasions of the Indian subcontinent.

7. In which year did Mahmud of Ghazni begin his Indian campaigns?

Answer: 1000 CE.

8. What was the capital of Mahmud of Ghazni's empire?

Answer: Ghazni.

9. Which famous temple did Mahmud of Ghazni attack in 1025 CE?

Answer: The Somnath Temple in Gujarat.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

10. Which region was the main centre of Mahmud of Ghazni's empire?

Answer: Ghazni and the surrounding region in present-day Afghanistan.

C. Prithviraj Chauhan

11. Who was Prithviraj Chauhan?

Answer: Prithviraj Chauhan was a prominent Rajput ruler of the Chauhan dynasty who ruled over Ajmer and Delhi.

12. What was the capital of Prithviraj Chauhan's kingdom?

Answer: Ajmer was an important capital of his kingdom.

13. Who was Prithviraj Chauhan's main opponent in the Battles of Tarain?

Answer: Muhammad Ghori.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

14. To which dynasty did Prithviraj Chauhan belong?

Answer: The Chauhan dynasty, also known as the Chahamana dynasty.

15. Which two important regions were associated with Prithviraj Chauhan's rule?

Answer: Ajmer and Delhi.

D. Battles of Tarain

16. Where were the Battles of Tarain fought?

Answer: At Tarain, near present-day Thanesar in Haryana.

17. In which year was the First Battle of Tarain fought?

Answer: 1191 CE.

18. Who won the First Battle of Tarain?

Answer: Prithviraj Chauhan and his forces.

19. In which year was the Second Battle of Tarain fought?

Answer: 1192 CE.

20. Who won the Second Battle of Tarain?

Answer: Muhammad Ghori.

TWO MARK:

A. Arab Invasion of Sindh

1. Who led the Arab invasion of Sindh, and when did it take place?

Answer: Muhammad bin Qasim led the Arab invasion of Sindh in 712 CE. He was sent by Al-Hajjaj ibn Yusuf, the governor of Iraq under the Umayyad Caliphate.

2. Who was Raja Dahir?

Answer: Raja Dahir was the ruler of Sindh when the Arabs invaded the region in the early 8th century. He was defeated by the forces of Muhammad bin Qasim in 712 CE.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

3. Mention two causes of the Arab invasion of Sindh.

Answer:

- The Arabs wanted to expand their political power and territory.
- The reported attack on Arab ships near the coast of Sindh provided the immediate justification for the expedition.

4. Mention two effects of the Arab conquest of Sindh.

Answer:

- Arab political control was established over parts of Sindh.
- Contacts between Indian and Arab societies increased, encouraging the exchange of knowledge, trade and cultural ideas.

5. Why was the Arab conquest of Sindh important in Indian history?

Answer: The conquest brought parts of Sindh under Arab Muslim rule and established an early political link between the Islamic world and the Indian subcontinent. However, Arab political control did not extend over most of India.

B. Invasions of Mahmud of Ghazni

6. Who was Mahmud of Ghazni?

Answer: Mahmud of Ghazni was the ruler of the Ghaznavid dynasty from 998 to 1030 CE. He conducted repeated military campaigns into the Indian subcontinent to gain wealth, territory and political influence.

7. Mention two objectives of Mahmud of Ghazni's Indian invasions.

Answer:

- He wanted to obtain wealth from wealthy cities and religious centres.
- He aimed to expand his political and military influence in the region.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

8. Which famous temple did Mahmud of Ghazni attack, and when?

Answer: Mahmud of Ghazni attacked the Somnath Temple in Gujarat in 1025 CE. The campaign is remembered as one of his most famous invasions of India.

9. Mention two effects of Mahmud of Ghazni's invasions.

Answer:

- His campaigns caused destruction and the loss of wealth in several targeted regions.
- They strengthened Ghaznavid influence in parts of the northwestern Indian subcontinent.

10. Did Mahmud of Ghazni establish a permanent empire over all of India?

Answer: No, Mahmud of Ghazni did not establish a permanent empire over all of India. His campaigns mainly targeted northwestern regions and wealthy centres, while his principal capital remained Ghazni.

C. Prithviraj Chauhan

11. Who was Prithviraj Chauhan?

Answer: Prithviraj Chauhan was a prominent ruler of the Chauhan or Chahamana dynasty during the 12th century. He ruled over territories associated with Ajmer and Delhi and fought against Muhammad Ghori.

12. What was the importance of Ajmer and Delhi during Prithviraj Chauhan's rule?

Answer: Ajmer was an important centre of Chauhan power, while Delhi was a strategically significant city in northern India. Control over these regions strengthened Prithviraj's political and military position.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

13. Who was Muhammad Ghori?

Answer: Muhammad Ghori was a ruler and military commander from the Ghurid dynasty. He led campaigns into northern India and defeated Prithviraj Chauhan in the Second Battle of Tarain in 1192 CE.

14. Mention two challenges faced by Prithviraj Chauhan.

Answer:

- He faced political competition from other regional rulers in northern India.
- He had to defend his territories against the military campaigns of Muhammad Ghori.

15. Why is Prithviraj Chauhan important in Indian history?

Answer: Prithviraj Chauhan is remembered as an important Rajput ruler of northern India. His battles against Muhammad Ghori, especially the Battles of Tarain, played a significant role in the political history of medieval India.

D. Battles of Tarain

16. Where were the Battles of Tarain fought?

Answer: The Battles of Tarain were fought near Tarain, close to present-day Thanesar in Haryana. They were fought between the forces of Prithviraj Chauhan and Muhammad Ghori in 1191 and 1192 CE.

17. What was the First Battle of Tarain?

Answer: The First Battle of Tarain was fought in 1191 CE between Prithviraj Chauhan and Muhammad Ghori. Prithviraj's forces defeated Muhammad Ghori's army in this battle.

18. What was the Second Battle of Tarain?

Answer: The Second Battle of Tarain was fought in 1192 CE between Prithviraj Chauhan and Muhammad Ghori. Muhammad Ghori won the battle, significantly weakening Chauhan power in northern India.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

19. Mention two differences between the First and Second Battles of Tarain.

Answer:

- First Battle (1191 CE): Prithviraj Chauhan defeated Muhammad Ghori.
- Second Battle (1192 CE): Muhammad Ghori defeated Prithviraj Chauhan.

20. What were the major results of the Second Battle of Tarain?

Answer: The defeat of Prithviraj Chauhan weakened the Chauhan kingdom and strengthened Ghurid influence in northern India. It helped create conditions for the expansion of Turkish political power in the region.

BROAD ANSWER:

Question 1. Discuss the causes and effects of the Arab invasion of Sindh.

Answer

Introduction

The Arab invasion of Sindh was an important event in early medieval Indian history. It took place in 712 CE when Muhammad bin Qasim led an Arab military expedition into Sindh. Sindh was then ruled by Raja Dahir. The invasion brought parts of the region under Arab Muslim political control and increased contact between the Indian subcontinent and the Islamic world.

Causes of the Arab Invasion

1. Political Expansion

During the 7th and 8th centuries, the Arab Caliphate expanded its territories across West Asia and other regions. After establishing control over Persia and neighbouring areas, Arab rulers became interested in expanding their influence towards the Indian subcontinent.

Sindh was an important frontier region because of its geographical position and connections with trade routes.

2. Economic Interests

Sindh had access to the Arabian Sea and was connected with maritime trade. Its ports and commercial routes were important for trade between India, Arabia and other regions.

Control over Sindh could help the Arabs strengthen their commercial connections and political influence in the region.

3. The Incident of Arab Ships

An incident involving ships travelling near the coast of Sindh is commonly mentioned as the immediate cause of the invasion.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

According to traditional accounts, ships carrying Arab passengers and goods were attacked by pirates near Debal.

Al-Hajjaj ibn Yusuf, the governor of Iraq, held Raja Dahir responsible for failing to prevent the attacks or secure the release of the captives. This dispute became a justification for military action.

4. Role of Muhammad bin Qasim

Al-Hajjaj sent Muhammad bin Qasim to lead the expedition against Sindh. Muhammad bin Qasim was a young general who organised the military campaign and advanced into the region.

He captured Debal and continued his campaign against Raja Dahir's forces. Raja Dahir was defeated and killed in battle in 712 CE.

Effects of the Arab Invasion

1. Establishment of Arab Rule

The invasion resulted in Arab political control over parts of Sindh and neighbouring areas. However, Arab authority remained largely confined to the northwestern region and did not extend over most of India.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

2. Political Changes

The conquest weakened the existing ruling authority in Sindh and introduced a new system of political administration in the conquered territories.

3. Religious Influence

Islam became more firmly established in parts of Sindh. Over time, Muslim communities developed in the region through political rule, trade, migration and social interaction.

4. Cultural Exchange

Contacts between Indian and Arab societies increased. Knowledge of mathematics, astronomy, medicine and philosophy gradually travelled through translation, trade and scholarly interaction. These exchanges developed over time and were not limited to the immediate effects of the invasion.

5. Trade and Commercial Relations

Arab merchants continued to maintain connections with Indian ports and trading centres. Sindh's geographical position helped connect the Indian subcontinent with the wider Islamic world.

Question 2. Explain the causes, major invasions and effects of Mahmud of Ghazni's campaigns in India.

Answer

Introduction

Mahmud of Ghazni was one of the most powerful rulers of the Ghaznavid dynasty. He ruled from 998 to 1030 CE, with Ghazni, in present-day Afghanistan, as his capital. During his reign, he conducted repeated military campaigns into the Indian subcontinent. His invasions affected several northwestern Indian kingdoms and wealthy religious and urban centres.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Causes of the Invasions

1. Desire for Wealth

One of the main objectives of Mahmud's campaigns was to obtain wealth. Many Indian cities and religious centres possessed valuable treasures. The wealth acquired through military campaigns helped finance his army, administration and royal court.

2. Political Expansion

Mahmud wanted to strengthen the Ghaznavid Empire and expand its influence beyond Afghanistan. Campaigns in the northwestern Indian subcontinent helped him establish political control over important frontier territories.

3. Military Ambition

Mahmud was an ambitious ruler who sought to increase his military reputation. His successful campaigns strengthened his authority and made Ghazni an important political and cultural centre.

4. Religious Motives

Mahmud's campaigns were also presented in religious terms in some historical accounts. However, his actions should be understood in the wider context of medieval warfare, political ambitions and the acquisition of wealth.

Major Invasions

1. Early Campaigns

Mahmud began his Indian campaigns around 1000 CE. He attacked territories in the northwestern region and fought against rulers who opposed his expansion.

These campaigns helped him strengthen his position along the frontier between his empire and the Indian kingdoms.

2. Campaign against the Hindu Shahi Kingdom

The Hindu Shahi rulers controlled important territories in the northwestern region. Mahmud fought against rulers such as Jayapala and Anandapala.

His victories weakened the Hindu Shahi kingdom and expanded Ghaznavid influence in the region.

3. Attack on Mathura and Other Centres

Mahmud conducted campaigns against several wealthy cities and religious centres. His attacks resulted in the loss of wealth and destruction in some targeted areas.

These campaigns also demonstrated the military difficulties faced by Indian regional kingdoms in resisting repeated invasions.

4. Attack on Somnath in 1025 CE

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

One of Mahmud's most famous campaigns was his attack on the Somnath Temple in Gujarat in 1025 CE. The temple was an important religious centre and possessed considerable wealth.

Mahmud's forces attacked the temple and carried away valuable treasures. The event became one of the most widely remembered episodes of his Indian campaigns.

Effects of the Invasions

1. Political Effects

Mahmud's campaigns weakened several northwestern Indian kingdoms and expanded Ghaznavid influence over parts of the region. However, he did not establish a permanent empire over all of India.

2. Economic Effects

The repeated raids caused the loss of wealth and damage to some cities and religious centres. The resources acquired by Mahmud helped strengthen his own empire.

3. Military Lessons

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

The invasions demonstrated the importance of military organisation, effective leadership and cooperation among regional powers in defending their territories.

4. Cultural Connections

Mahmud's court at Ghazni became an important centre of Persian-language culture and scholarship. His reign is also associated with scholars such as Al-Biruni, who studied Indian society, religion, mathematics and philosophy.

Question 3. Write an essay on the life, achievements and historical importance of Prithviraj Chauhan.

Answer

Introduction

Prithviraj Chauhan was one of the best-known Rajput rulers of medieval northern India. He belonged to the Chauhan or Chahamana dynasty and ruled during the 12th century. His political power was associated particularly with Ajmer and Delhi. He is remembered mainly for his military conflicts with Muhammad Ghori, especially the two Battles of Tarain fought in 1191 and 1192 CE.

Early Life and Rise to Power

Prithviraj Chauhan became ruler of the Chauhan kingdom during the second half of the 12th century. His kingdom occupied an important position in northern India, with Ajmer as a major political centre.

Delhi was also strategically important because of its location and connections with other parts of northern India. Control over these regions gave Prithviraj an important position among the regional rulers of his time.

Political and Military Achievements

1. Strengthening Chauhan Power

Prithviraj worked to maintain and expand the authority of the Chauhan dynasty. His kingdom was involved in the political competition that characterised northern India during the 12th century.

He had to deal with rival rulers and protect his territories against external threats. His military activities reflected the importance of regional alliances and competition during this period.

2. Control over Important Territories

Ajmer was an important centre of Chauhan administration and military power. Delhi was also associated with Prithviraj's authority and played a major strategic role.

The possession of important cities and surrounding territories helped strengthen his political position.

3. Conflict with Muhammad Ghori

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

The most important event in Prithviraj's career was his conflict with Muhammad Ghori, a ruler of the Ghurid dynasty. Muhammad Ghori wanted to expand his influence into northern India.

Their conflict resulted in two major battles at Tarain, near present-day Thanesar in Haryana.

The First Battle of Tarain, 1191 CE

The First Battle of Tarain took place in 1191 CE. Prithviraj Chauhan's forces defeated Muhammad Ghori's army.

This victory temporarily stopped Ghori's advance into the territories controlled by Prithviraj. It also demonstrated the military strength of the Chauhan kingdom.

However, the victory did not end the conflict. Muhammad Ghori returned the following year with a renewed military campaign.

The Second Battle of Tarain, 1192 CE

The Second Battle of Tarain was fought in 1192 CE. This time, Muhammad Ghori defeated Prithviraj Chauhan.

The defeat seriously weakened Chauhan power and strengthened Ghurid influence in northern India. It became a major turning point in the political history of the region.

The battle helped create conditions for further Turkish expansion into northern India, although the establishment of lasting political control involved additional campaigns and developments.

Historical Importance

Prithviraj Chauhan is remembered as an important ruler because of his role in the political and military struggles of 12th-century northern India.

His battles with Muhammad Ghori are discussed in many historical accounts. Later literary works and popular traditions also celebrated his courage, although such accounts sometimes combine historical facts with legend.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

His reign illustrates the competition among regional kingdoms and the challenges they faced from expanding military powers.

Question 4. Discuss the causes, events and results of the First and Second Battles of Tarain.

Answer

Introduction

The Battles of Tarain were two important military conflicts fought between Prithviraj Chauhan and Muhammad Ghori in northern India. The First Battle took place in 1191 CE, while the Second Battle occurred in 1192 CE. These battles played a major role in the expansion of Ghurid power and the changing political situation of northern India during the late 12th century.

Causes of the Battles

1. Expansion of Ghurid Power

Muhammad Ghori wanted to extend his authority into northern India. The region contained important cities, strategic routes and wealthy territories. Expanding into these areas would strengthen the Ghurid Empire.

2. Importance of Northern India

Delhi, Ajmer and the surrounding territories held considerable strategic importance. Control over these areas could provide access to important routes and increase political influence.

3. Conflict with Prithviraj Chauhan

Prithviraj Chauhan was a powerful regional ruler whose territories stood in the way of Muhammad Ghori's expansion. Their competing political ambitions led to military conflict.

The First Battle of Tarain, 1191 CE

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

The First Battle of Tarain was fought in 1191 CE near present-day Thanesar in Haryana.

Prithviraj Chauhan led the forces opposing Muhammad Ghori. In this battle, Prithviraj's army defeated Ghori's forces.

The victory was important because it checked Ghori's advance and temporarily protected Chauhan interests in northern India.

However, Muhammad Ghori did not abandon his ambitions. He reorganised his forces and prepared for another campaign.

The Second Battle of Tarain, 1192 CE

The Second Battle of Tarain took place in 1192 CE. Muhammad Ghori returned with a reorganised army and confronted Prithviraj Chauhan's forces.

This time, Muhammad Ghori won the battle. Prithviraj's defeat weakened the Chauhan kingdom and reduced its ability to resist Ghurid expansion.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

The Second Battle is often regarded as a major turning point in the political history of northern India because it opened the way for further Ghurid campaigns in the region.

Results of the Battles

1. Defeat of Prithviraj Chauhan

The defeat in 1192 CE weakened the political and military authority of Prithviraj Chauhan. The Chauhan kingdom lost much of its earlier influence in the region.

2. Expansion of Ghurid Influence

Muhammad Ghori's victory strengthened Ghurid power in northern India. It allowed his commanders to pursue further military and political expansion.

3. Political Changes

The battles contributed to changes in the balance of power among the regional kingdoms. The defeat of a major ruler created opportunities for other powers to extend their authority.

4. Foundation for Later Developments

The victory at Tarain helped prepare the ground for the establishment of Turkish rule in parts of northern India. Muhammad Ghori's campaigns and the activities of his commanders contributed to the rise of the Delhi Sultanate in the early 13th century.

5. Historical Significance

The two battles demonstrate how the outcome of military campaigns could change the political situation of a region. The first battle checked Ghori's advance, while the second enabled him to strengthen his position.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

Question 5. Compare the Arab invasion of Sindh with the invasions of Mahmud of Ghazni.

Answer

Introduction

The Arab invasion of Sindh in 712 CE and the invasions of Mahmud of Ghazni during the 11th century were important events in the history of medieval India. Both involved military expeditions from regions to the northwest of the Indian subcontinent. However, they differed in their objectives, geographical extent, political results and long-term effects.

1. Historical Background

The Arab invasion of Sindh occurred during the expansion of the Umayyad Caliphate. Muhammad bin Qasim led the expedition against Raja Dahir and established Arab political control over parts of Sindh.

Mahmud of Ghazni ruled the Ghaznavid Empire from 998 to 1030 CE. He conducted repeated military campaigns into the Indian subcontinent, targeting several northwestern kingdoms, cities and wealthy religious centres.

Thus, the two events occurred in different historical periods and involved different ruling powers.

2. Objectives of the Invasions

Arab Invasion of Sindh: The Arabs aimed to expand their political influence, strengthen control over frontier territories and secure commercial interests. The reported attack on Arab ships near Sindh provided the immediate justification for Muhammad bin Qasim's expedition.

Mahmud of Ghazni's Invasions: Mahmud's campaigns were strongly connected with the acquisition of wealth, political expansion and military prestige. His attacks on wealthy centres helped finance and strengthen the Ghaznavid state.

Both invasions involved political and economic motives, although the immediate circumstances differed.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App

3. Leaders and Opponents

The Arab invasion was led by Muhammad bin Qasim, who fought against Raja Dahir, the ruler of Sindh. Raja Dahir was defeated and killed in 712 CE.

Mahmud of Ghazni fought against several rulers and kingdoms, including the Hindu Shahi rulers of the northwestern region. His campaigns were conducted repeatedly over many years rather than through a single expedition.

4. Geographical Extent

The Arab conquest established control over parts of Sindh and neighbouring areas. Arab political authority did not extend over most of the Indian subcontinent.

Mahmud's invasions covered several regions of northwestern and northern India. However, his main political centre remained Ghazni, and he did not establish a permanent empire over all of India.

Therefore, neither invasion resulted in the immediate conquest of the entire subcontinent.

5. Political Effects

The Arab invasion ended the rule of Raja Dahir in Sindh and established a new political authority in parts of the region. Arab rule created lasting connections between Sindh and the Islamic world.

Mahmud's campaigns weakened several Indian kingdoms and expanded Ghaznavid influence in the northwest. His invasions also demonstrated the military challenges faced by regional rulers in resisting repeated campaigns.

6. Religious and Cultural Effects

The Arab conquest helped establish Muslim political and religious communities in parts of Sindh. Trade and social interaction encouraged cultural exchange between Indian and Arab societies.

Mahmud's reign strengthened Ghazni as a centre of Persian-language court culture. His court was associated with scholars such as Al-Biruni, who studied Indian intellectual and cultural traditions.

However, the cultural consequences of both events developed over time rather than occurring entirely during the military campaigns themselves.

7. Similarities and Differences

Both invasions involved rulers seeking greater political influence and access to valuable resources. Both affected regional kingdoms and increased contact between the Indian subcontinent and neighbouring regions.

The main difference was that the Arab conquest established relatively lasting political control over parts of Sindh, whereas Mahmud's Indian campaigns were largely repeated military expeditions aimed at wealth and strategic influence, alongside control over some northwestern territories.

CAREER STUDY
The Learning App